Ohio AITC...

Agriculture in the Classroom was initiated in 1981 by USDA Secretary John Block to "help students acquire enough knowledge to function effectively as agriculturally literate citizens supportive of wise agricultural policies and programs."

This site contains information about the goals and missions of AITC and its supporting organizations and sponsors, as well as educational agricultural materials for students and resources for teachers.

Here's What's New with AITC!

"Celebrating the Harvest A-Z"

Now available -- a comprehensive, hands-on educational kit targeted at 1st through 3rd grades to expand student and teacher knowledge of where food comes from. Full of new and useful resources which provide a diversity of activities about the Harvest Season. Useful all year long in helping students to meet the proficiencies. New Home for AITC

The Ohio Agriculture Awareness Council (OAAC) was dedicated to providing Agriculture in the Classroom (AITC) programs and activities. As of February 1, 1999, the organization has dissolved, but the AITC programs continue in the hands of the Ohio Agriculture Council (OAC) and the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation (OFBF). Agriculture is important to all of us. It affects each of us directly because it provides our food, clothing and shelter. Indirectly, it is a major contributor to the economy of our nation and to international trade. Browse this site to find new programs and resources which make agriculture real in your life and connect you to the expansive world of agriculture.
